Many of our readers have seen freadorned by nature when in her most and take the lives of other innocent Scott decision without knowing its in Missouri, who was taken by his master to Illinois in 1834. There slavery was prohibited, and Scott married and lived there four years. In 1838 his master took him to Minnesota Territory, where slavery was also prohibited by the act of 1820. From there Scott was taken back to Missouri and maltreated. He brought suit for damages, claiming that, by reason of his residence in free territory, he was a free man. His owner denied that he was a citizen or could sue. The Missouri State Court gave judgment in favor of Scott, but after some time the case was appealed to the U. S. FLOWKERS. BY ROSE TARRY COORS.

Wer lillie prayer at night she said, Then looked with wintful ayes Maif tenderly and half afraid, Up to the starry atten,

For daily bread, na'er soughl in vain, Hhe saked the heavesty powers, "Four, God!" she whispered low again, "Div' see my daily fowers!"

Her daily flowers, her baby days, And like a flower to all her eay a The dimpled creature grew,

At fair and aweel a tlay maid As any new-horn blossom That dawn and dew's soft stress persuade From mother earth's broad box

And flowers like kin the durling loved; She bore the fragrant band, Where'er she played, where'er she roved,

And while she prayed, with look askanes Too great for God to give perchance For just her baby pleasure.

I echoed in my heart her prayer, Remembering earth's and hours, And weary weight of sin and care, "Give no our daily flowers!

"The kindly word, the smile serope, The brotherhood in speech and miles

"These buman bloscoms of the hear Give to our daily needing! Dear Lord! are not these too a part Of Thins immortal feeding?

And back the andden answer fall : "Whate'er My band helb given My constant love and care in lell, Is lruly bread from heaven."

wasn't as hot as it is now. Ages ago axes, and got her away. all North America and all Northern Europe lay sleeping within a covering of for the winter. But it wasn't so very sylvania, and reached the astonishing interfered with by the lee-cold finid inlee. This cool covering was in many bad. Even on the 21st of December places over half a mile thick. Rivers they enjoyed five hours of blessed sunof ice, 3,000 feet deep, leveled up the shine. They spent a july Christmas forty-nine, the great-gramhaother of blood vessels become over-distended, valleys even with the hill tops, and with the thermometer only—35 degrees. flowed on and on slowly over the ground Indeed, it never went lower than 46 de- of 33. toward the oceans. All the shallow seas and ocean were frozen solid to the 1872-3, the same navigator wintered at bottom. Where groups of islands are Spitzbergen, in 80 degrees north latiatrung along the coasts now, all was then one solid mainland. The intervening waters were frozen into an ironhard mass. The world was ice-locked. All this geologists have found out by their learning.

Snow falling year after year upon the mountain tops lay without melting, Constant accumulation from above pressed it together till it became ice, The same pressure forced it on down through the valleys. Along the shores of the continents gigantic ice walls were formed, since in no part of the sea was the water deep enough to float the masses away. From time to time, linge pieces of these walls crumbled away and fell into the water. Then mountaina of ice stood about the wall. In our day Dr. Hayes saw off the coast of Greenland an iceberg aground in water nearly half a mile deep. His estimate was that it weighed 2,000,000,000 have made l

Just anch a solid, frozen wall as reared its front around the coasts of Europe and North America is seen to-day, on the northern limit of the Antarctic contineut. Sir J. C. Ross sailed along its edge for a distance of 450 miles, and found it nubroken by a single inlet. Europe and America were surrounded. well-nigh overwholmed, by an Arctic ocean, filled with ice-rafts and leebergs a mile high. The same processes now in operation among the great glaciors of the Alps were going on then on a gigantic scale. Above the anow-line in the Alps, the constant accumulations of frozen vapors are still squeezing the snow beneath into los. It is pressed together into the valleys, and the great ice rivers still crawl slowly, almost imperceptibly, onward to the sea, melting in anmmer, and leaving great rows of scratched atones and debris.

The whole interior of Greenland pre sents to-day the same appearance the present civilized world did during the glacial period. It is wholly burled underneath a great weight of ice and snow, which levels up valleys and aweeps over hilla in its creeping, mysterious progress toward the ocean. Where it reaches the margin of the sea, a great, 40 degrees. They made junraeys over awful wall of fee atands, 300 feet above the sea level. How far down into the water it goes, nobody knows. Nobody ever went down to sec.

Human foot has scarcely left a track in the snow in this deadly cold interior region. "All is one dead, dreary expanse of white," says Gcike. In a space of country six times as large as the whole British empire, not a live creature, man, beast or bird, is to be seen. The cold is too intense. Not a sound is ever heard, save only when the storm whistles through the snow and ice crags.

Daring explorers in ahips have from time to time skirted along the Greenland ice wall. They speak of the scene as splendid and terrible beyond description. Sometimes the wall sleeps white and still in its everlasting fetters of frost, Or a little wind will come, and whisk vast clouds of snow dust down from the ice cliffs. Anon the ailence will be broken by a deafening crash. A hill of ice breaks off from the glacier and tumbles into the ocean, causing the sea to "boil like a pot," An explorer in this part of the world was once waked up in the morning by a sailor, who gave him the appalling information that the fire had all gone ont, and that "the merenry was slear down to the ball." Their coffee in the coffee pot was frozen hard as a stone, Their bisenits were like so many cullets. It was a thrilling momanaged to start a fire. But a field of ice barred their progress. After trying ineffectually to force their ship through It they finally gave up, and anchored to an lee-floe. Afterward it got so hot, however, that the temperature of the water a little ways down into the ocean was only one degree below zero. In these high northern latitudes fresh meat will stay frozen hard as iron for untold hundreds of years. The bodies of Siberian mammoths have been found, imbedded in ice, as fresh as when the animal breathed its last expiring sigh, though the Lord knows how many ages ago that event relish as though it had been fresh-killed,

The cinnattl it is observed that 101 degrees above zero in the slude has the same effect. When the light came back the explorers looked at one another and found that the faces of all had a palo yellowish green tint, the color of a lank potato apront in a cellar, all summer. For really cool and refreshing reading in hot weather, however, we can not do better than to turn to Capt. C. F. Hall's Arctic explorations. If e mentions sitting up in bed, in his snow-house, and writing in his journal when the mercury ontside the lint went down to 52 degrees below zero. While his ship was frozen pounds. What an ice-house it would in on the northern coasts, he took a try in the month of January. He took three poumls of Cincinnati eracklings along for soup. He says the soup was excellent.

One part of the story is tolerably stiff, as auits a frozen region. The Captain wore a long, heavy beard. If is breath coated his whiskers with frost, Finally they froze in a solid mass together, hard and nnyielding as a poker. Ho wished to take his reindeer jacket off over his head, but the hard mass of ico and board prevented. Finally he took out his knife, in a desperate state of mind, and hacked off chunk after chunk of whiskered ice, till he was thally enabled to remove his jacket.

During the time they took this sleighing party over the frozen continent, a terrific atorm came up. Great cracks of ice vawned beneath them. The wind whistled with such fury, and the ice beneath them creaked so abruningty, that they expected every moment they and their "igloo," or snow-house, would be harled into half a mile of ice-water,

Capt, Hall discovered an islaml which ie named Bishop island. The explorers used to take walks in the fresh air for their health, with the merenry at broken ice floes, Sometimes they stepped into a freacherous cruck, which would immediately widen, and plunge them into alcadly cold weather below. March 17, with the merenry at-12 degreen, they witnessed a phenomenon. Showers of snow fell from a perfectly clear aky, so clear that they could look up and see the stars shining through the rain of snow crystals. They frosted their heels and their noses. Onco, being vory thirsty, Card, Hall chipped off some bits of ice from an iceberg and put them into his month. He tells us it froze his month fast,-Cincinnati Commercial.

APOID SUBJECTS OF DISPUTATION. Don't set up any subjects of dispute in your house. From frequent dispute there is such a growth of angry words, mortified vanity and the like, that the original subject of difference becomes a standing subject for quarrel, and there is a tendency in all mluor disputes to drift down to it. If people wish to live well together, they must not hold too much to logic, and suppose that everything is to be settled by sufficient reason, Dr. Johnson saw this clearly with regard to married people, when he said: Wretched would be the pair, above all names of wretchedness, who should be doomed to infinit by reason, every morning, all the minute detail of the domestic day." But the application should be much more general than he made it. There is no time for anch reasonings, and nothing that is worth them. And, when we recollect how two lawyers or two politicians can go on contending, and that there is no end to one-sided reasoning on any subject, we shall not be anre that anch contention is the best mode of arriving at trnth. But certainly it is not the way to arrive at good temper.
